Obiettivi Formativi	OBIETT_FO	3800	Si		The main goal of the course Welfare and Labor Policy is to enable students to master the analytical tools for the study of social and labor policies and to apply

Del Corso / Course Formative Objectives	RM				them to understand the developmental trajectories of contemporary welfare states, including the socio-economic and political challenges they face. A special emphasis will be given to welfare and labor policy reforms introduced in the wake of the recent economic crisis. A major goal of the course is to enable students to critically assess the welfare state literature, as well as empirical developments and policy reforms.
Prerequisiti / Prerequisites	PREREQ	3800	Si		Basic knowledge of public policy analysis and economics
Contenuti Del Corso / Course Contents	CONTENUTI	3800	Si		The course deals with social and labor policy analysis, with a special focus on European welfare states. It is ideally divided into three parts. The first part starts with a bird's eye view on social protection in the world, then provides the fundamental analytical tools for the study of social protection systems in a comparative perspective: concepts and models. A comparative-historical dimension is introduced, focusing on welfare state development, since its origins in the XIX century until the recent phase of crisis and reform. Social protection models developed to account for the European experience are then extended or modified to analyze non-European welfare states. The second part focuses with a comparative perspective on selected policy fields and policies: pensions, health care, family, care, employment and poverty. The third part revolves around challenges to contemporary advanced welfare states, including migrations and technological change, and processes of change and re-adaptation in different welfare regimes, with a special focus on recent reforms in the context of the economic crisis.
